Welcome to

KESPER®

a family company for generations

The company F. ANTON KESPER, founded in 1902, has a long-standing and close connection to the natural material wood. Our extensive product range includes household goods, basket ware, small furniture, kitchen trolleys, storage chests and boxes, as well as office products. Storage capacity for over 25,000 pallet positions ensures a high level of supply reliability.

Preserving resources and using them responsibly is a core part of our corporate philosophy. All items in our 'Wood Collection' are made exclusively from wood sourced from controlled European forestry (FSC®-certified), from Asian natural rubber plantations, or from sustainably managed forests.

For many years, we have taken a pioneering role in using bamboo in a wide range of products, also with FSC® certification. Our products are manufactured without tropical deforestation.

We are a member of amfori, the world's leading business association for open and sustainable trade. Together with amfori BSCI, we continuously improve the social sustainability of our supply chains.

PERFECT CUTTING BOARDS FOR FRESH- NESS & VARIETY

BAMBOO BOARDS

Bamboo (botanical name: Phyllostachys heterocycla var. pubescens) is considered one of the most valuable renewable resources due to its extremely rapid growth. Worldwide, there are more than 1,000 different bamboo species. Particularly in Asia, bamboo has significant ecological, economic and cultural importance.

We primarily use the botanically classified species Phyllostachys heterocycla. The huge grass lignifies and is a good material for our cutting boards, kitchen utensils and furniture. In terms of hardness and strength, bamboo is comparable to many hardwoods.

Our oiled cutting boards are treated with a food-safe oil. This treatment reduces moisture absorption, increases resistance and helps protect the boards from premature staining and wear. All bamboo cutting boards are FSC® certified and originate from responsibly managed forests.

PURE AESTHETICS, THAT INSPIRES DARK BAMBOO

Various techniques such as smoking or dyeing give our bamboo a darker colour. This can help it to match certain interior styles or colour schemes.

The darker colour does not affect the natural properties of bamboo, such as hardness and resilience.

So if you are looking for stylish items to give your home a unique look, the KESPER dark bamboo series is just what you need.

THE ALL-ROUNDER
FOR CUTTING, ARRANGING AND SERVING

ACACIA CUTTING BOARDS

Many different species of acacia grow worldwide. We exclusively use acacia wood sourced from Southeast Asia, including Thailand and Vietnam. The colour of the wood ranges from dark brown to white. The acacia wood (bot. Acacia hybrid mangium × auriculif) is characterised by its resistance to moisture and dimensional stability. For this reason, acacia wood is particularly suitable for cutting boards.

Our cutting boards are treated with food-safe oil. This treatment reduces moisture absorption, contributes to increased resistance and supports protection against premature staining during normal use.

All acacia wood cutting boards are FSC® certified and made from responsibly managed forests.

ROBUST QUALITY AND NATURAL BEAUTY FOR THE KITCHEN

OAK CUTTING BOARDS

Oak cutting boards are tough and durable. Oak is a hard, dense wood that is highly resistant to wear and cutting grooves. Oak's natural strength and resilience make it ideal for everyday use in the kitchen. Oak also has an attractive, warm colour and a distinctive grain that makes every chopping board a real eye-catcher.

The wood surface is easy to maintain and, with regular care such as oiling, can retain its beauty and functionality for years to come. As well as being practical, oak cutting boards are a stylish addition to any kitchen.

CUTTING BOARDS

OCCASION

BEECH CUTTING BOARDS

The common beech (bot. 'Fagus sylvatica') is a native deciduous tree that is widespread in Europe. It grows from southern Scandinavia to Sicily and can reach a height of up to 30 metres and a trunk diameter of over 1 metre. After 80 to 120 years, the trees are used in the wood industry.

The wood is very hard and therefore ideal for processing into kitchen items such as cutting boards or wooden spoons.

In our range, we offer beech cutting boards made from untreated wood – the nature-identical surface gives the board a natural look.

Our oiled cutting boards are impregnated with food-safe oil. This reduces moisture penetration, makes the boards more resistant and reduces the risk of premature staining.

All beech cutting boards are FSC® certified and come from sustainably managed forests.

RUBBER TREE CUTTING BOARDS

Cutting boards made from rubber tree wood are a popular choice in the kitchen thanks to their combination of hardness and flexibility. Rubber tree wood, also known as Hevea, is sourced from rubber plantations and is particularly durable. It is resistant to scratches and everyday wear, while being gentle on knife blades and helping to prevent them from becoming dull too quickly.

Thanks to its dense structure, the material is resistant to moisture and supports good hygiene. Rubber tree cutting boards are easy to care for and retain their distinctive beauty when treated regularly with oil.

CUTTING & CARVING – THE HYGIENIC WAY

PLASTIC CUTTING BOARDS

Plastic cutting boards are characterised by their exceptional robustness and are therefore perfect for everyday use in the kitchen. They are food-safe, which means that they can be used safely in contact with various foods without any unwanted flavour transfer.

In addition, plastic cutting boards offer high cut resistance, so they do not wear out or become damaged quickly, even with intensive use. They are dishwasher-safe for easy cleaning, while their heat resistance of up to 90 °C protects them from damage caused by hot pots or pans.

Another advantage is their ease of care: they require no special care instructions, making them a practical choice for any household.

Paper fibre laminate: robust, high-quality and durable

Cutting boards made of paper fibre laminate (cellulose) consist of pressed paper fibres that are bonded together using high-quality synthetic resins.

This material is impressive due to its high dimensional stability and good moisture and heat resistance.

The closed, smooth surface is hygienic, kind to knives and particularly easy to clean.

This makes paper fibre laminate cutting boards a reliable and durable solution for everyday kitchen use.

Olive wood

The olive tree (bot. Olea europaea) is a medium-sized tree that often becomes gnarled with age. It grows as a densely branched, evergreen tree or shrub and, depending on the variety, reaches heights of 10 to 20 metres. Olive trees require a long time to grow but can live for several hundred years. They are only released for timber use once they no longer bear fruit.

Olive wood is exceptionally hard, extremely durable and virtually free from warping, making it ideal for the production of cutting boards. Thanks to its distinctive grain, cutting boards made from olive wood are also a real visual highlight.

Beech wood

The common beech (bot. Fagus sylvatica) is a native deciduous tree that is widespread throughout Europe. Its natural range extends from southern Scandinavia to Sicily. A height of up to 30 metres and a trunk diameter of more than one metre are not uncommon. After 80 to 120 years, the trees are further processed in the wood industry. Beech wood is very hard and therefore ideally suited for the production of kitchen items such as cutting boards and cooking spoons. The heartwood is light in colour, features a subtle grain and has a smooth surface, while the reddish-brown sapwood displays a more lively, distinctive pattern.

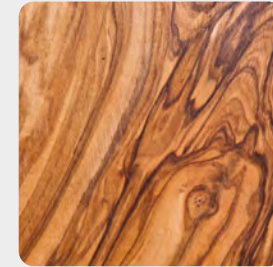

Almost all KESPER beech wood products are made from FSC[®] certified wood.

Bamboo

Bamboo cane is one of the best renewable resources due to its rapid growth rate. There are more than 1,000 different bamboo species worldwide. Especially in Asia, bamboo plays an important ecological, economic and cultural role. We primarily process the botanical species known as Phyllostachys heterocycla var. pubescens.

This giant grass becomes woody and can therefore be used as a material source for our cutting boards, kitchen utensils and furniture. In terms of hardness and resistance, bamboo is comparable to many hardwoods. Many KESPER bamboo products are already made from FSC[®] certified material.

Pine wood

Pine is a coniferous tree and, after spruce, the second most common forest tree species in Germany and parts of Central Europe. However, the various species of pine can be found all over the world. In forest stands, pine trees typically grow straight with a solid, cylindrical trunk. As a species that is undemanding in terms of site conditions, pine grows very quickly. Furniture production is one of the main areas of use for pine wood.

Pine is easy to work with, as it is highly elastic and does not break easily. We primarily process pine wood of the botanical species Pinus sylvestris.

Acacia wood

Many different species of acacia grow worldwide. We exclusively process acacia wood from Southeast Asia, such as Thailand and Vietnam. The colouring of the wood ranges from dark brown to white. Acacia wood (bot. Acacia hybrid mangium × auriculiformis) is particularly resistant to moisture and almost free from warping. For this reason, acacia wood is especially suitable for cutting boards used in commercial applications subject to high levels of wear.

Most KESPER acacia wood products are made from FSC[®] certified wood.

Birch wood

The birch (bot. Betula pendula) is a very fast-growing and tall-growing woody plant. It can reach a height of up to 7 metres within the first six years. When fully grown, birch trees can reach heights of up to 30 metres. The brown-and-white bark is particularly characteristic of the birch tree. The tree is widespread in Northern and Central Europe, as well as in Russia and northern China. The light-coloured, slightly grained wood has long fibres and is particularly suitable for the production of tooth-picks, as well as cutting boards and other kitchen products.

Most KESPER birch wood products are made from FSC[®] certified wood.

We also have products made from the following types of woods:

lotus (Schima wallichii), fir (Cunninghamia lanceolata) and eucalyptus (Eucalyptus spp.)
